DEDICATION

To these enlisted men, the unsung heroes of Ryan Field, who teach us Link, keep our planes in the air, work in our hospital, deliver our mail, and keep our records straight in Administration, we of Class 44-G in admiration and appreciation dedicate our book.

PRIDE IN achievement is normal to all mankind. When that achievement involves completion of a course of primary training, admittedly most exacting, pride may justifiably become very great. If this pride be tempered by a realization of the tremendous task still remaining and a determination to be equally successful henceforth then all is well. However, if overweaning pride blinds the consciousness to future obligations and possible pitfalls, then it becomes dangerous as a serpent and must be cast out.

Resolve now that your pride takes that form which serves as a spur, driving always to ever greater accomplishments until that final day of reckoning when you will be tried and not found wanting.

Heartiest personal congratulations and best wishes for enduring success.

JOHN S. FOUCHE, JR.
Major, Air Corps,
Commanding

COMMANDANT OF CADETS

GENTLEMAN, you have found that learning how to fly is not easy—you have learned that ability and desire is not all that is required to fly—you are aware that discipline, leardership, and work must be added to those factors if you are to succeed.

The fact that you have successfully completed this phase of your training does not mean you can let down and rest on your past accomplishments.

The fulfillment of your ambitions is not far away—but to win those wings will take steadfast determination and plain "guts." Let's not let down fellows and as you go on through your advanced phases of training, know that the best wishes of myself and the officers of the Cadet Detachment are with you.

Good luck and Happy Landings.

DURING THE last war and until a few years ago it was said that a pilot is only as good as his airplane. This is no longer true. In the race for higher speed and greater altitude, the performance of airplanes has moved relentlessly ahead until now it is the airplane that is vastly superior to the pilot.

It is important that the airman realize his shortcomings and weaknesses and learn how to compensate for or prevent them. As your training continues, the various physical and physiological problems that arise during flying will be explained and you will be given the latest knowledge of proved solutions to these problems.

The ancient Greeks, who strived for the ideal in physical and mental perfection, had a great motto: "Know thyself." The flyer, by following those two simple words, will never fail either himself or his country.

During hours of strenuous calisthenics and running the Burma Road, we with tired bodies and aching muscles at times became disheartened. But as we leave we remember the words of Lt. Howsmon in our orientation at Ryan: Get in shape and stay in shape, for some day your life may depend on your physical condition.

TO CLASS 44-G:

NOTHING is more inevitable than the unceasing passing of time. What and how we use time is the factor that determines future advancement and achievements.

The days of the last two months are now rapidly fading into the past—they are yesterdays, but the value received from them is now the motivation for your future progress.

You have done your job in Primary well; you now know what it takes, so do that and more in your future training, and the progress rate you establish will be ample reward for the job well done.

Always proudly and capably execute the duties and assignments which will later be entrusted to each of you; we know you will. For the Flight Staff as a whole, and for myself, the best of luck and success, continuously.

OUR MOULDS

The Military

We came to Ryan as raw material. To most of us flying was new. We were taken in hand by these two men, groomed in the military and taught our first phase of flying. With our rough edges smoothed off we are ready to go on to Basic and Advanced for our finishing touches with confidence that we will become military pilots.
